THE IMPARTIALIST, OR UNIVERSAL REFORMER,

No. IX.

(To be continued occaſionally.)

Fugit irrevocabile Tempus

THE Train of Reflections, which I had purſued, on the Abuſe of Time, made ſuch an Impreſſion on my Mind, that no ſooner was I aſleep, than my Fancy wing'd me through many extravagant Scenes, and preſented to my View a Cave of ſtupendous Extent. Methought as I approached near it I heard a confus'd Murmur of Voices, "as of the Sound of many Waters." I was very deſirous of entering, but the pitchy Darkneſs which envelop'd the whole—intimidated me from proceeding. While I was in this Suſpenſe a Form of engaging Mien approach'd me. "Stranger, ſaid he, are you deſirous of paſſing through "the Cave of Probation? Take then this Taper, "and follow me." Struck with Veneration I obedient follow'd. We paſs'd thro' a narrow Opening, and my Taper at firſt yielded ſo languiſhing a Light, that I could ſcarce diſcern my Way, and with Difficulty diſtinguiſh the Objects before me. By Degrees it became more luminous, and reverting to View the Avenue we had entered, I perceiv'd Multitudes ruſhing thro' the ſame Paſſage, and found that their Tapers were at firſt dim like mine, but gradually increaſing in Luſtre. After we had proceeded ſome Way, I was aſtoniſh'd at the Tumult and Confuſion which ſeem'd to reign around me. On this Side I ſaw Crowds hurrying and buſtling one Way; on the other, Numbers with equal Hurry and Noiſe, buſied in other Purſuits. The Whole appear'd to me one continued Scene of Diſorder. Pain'd with my Perplexity, I was preparing to aſk my Conductor to explain the Miſtery, when a Being of majeſtic Figure drew near. Her Locks hung careleſsly down her Neck, and her Robes looſely flow'd with the eaſy Air of Negligence. She had a Glaſs in her Hand, which ſhe continually employed, as ſhe approach'd me with ſlow and ſolemn Pace. "This, ſaid my Guide, "is Contemplation, to her I commit you, if you "deſire to diſcover the Nature of this Place." Contemplation courteouſly graſping my Hand, beckon'd me to follow, and ſlowly led me to an Eminence, which tho' rugged in its Aſcent, grew more eaſy and pleaſing as we approach'd the Summit. When we had ſeated ourſelves, ſhe put her Glaſs in my Hand, and directed me where firſt to obſerve. "The Radiance, ſaid ſhe, which you "behold breaking in, at the fartheſt Part of the "Cave, from yonder Avenue, proceeds from the "Region of Happineſs, which lies beyond it. The "Road which you perceive leading to it, hemm'd "in near the Paſſage with Rocks, is the Path of "Virtue. 'Tis difficult for any Perſon to enter it "ſo near its End; they muſt begin their Progreſs "yonder, where it is open, tho' rugged, and ap"proach to this Point, with ſlow, but ſteady Tra"vel; and it is equally difficult for any that have "proceeded ſo far to clamber over into the High"ways of Vice that ſurround it.

"This Cave is a Place of Trial. Every Perſon "who is put into it has a Taper beſtow'd on him. "If they gain the Path of Virtue, before their "Light is expir'd; according to the Progreſs they "have made, they are rewarded with higher or "lower Stations in the Regions of Felicity. But "if it is extinguiſh'd before they reach the Path, "they infallibly fall into thoſe Caverns which you "ſee every where abounding, where, they are left "in Obſcurity and Miſery." I thank'd my Inſtructreſs for her neceſſary Information; and turned my Glaſs to behold the Employments of the various Paſſengers. The firſt Phænomenon which met my Obſervation, was a large Fire, not far diſtant from the Avenue which I had enter'd, around which I ſaw Multitudes preſſing with their Tapers juſt illumined. Pleas'd (as I ſuppoſe) with the agreeable Heat, ſome appear'd almoſt frantic, and caper'd and whoop'd round it like Madmen. Some were reclin'd near it in Circles lull'd into a Lethargy, whilſt others diſcover'd an Inclination to leave it, but were ſo enervated that they receded not an Inch, and after two or three Struggles ſunk down to their former Poſition. One common Effect I diſcern'd it had on all, that their Tapers melted rapidly away, and ſome expir'd in a Moment; but what moſt aſtoniſh'd me, was to behold a Crowd whom I a Moment before ſaw leaving it, ruſhing back again with their Lights almoſt extinct, and ſuffering them to blaze immediately into nothing. My Guide inform'd me that this was the Fire of Intemperance, the moſt pernicious Enemy in the Cave. While I was gazing on the melancholy Scene, I ſaw an angelic Form with ruddy Countenance, preſſing amidſt the unhappy Crowd, endeavouring to entice them from the Place. She pointed to their expiring Tapers, offer'd to add new Wax and to reſtore their Brightneſs. But the whole Crew hiſs'd and ſpurn'd her from them. As ſhe turn'd to depart, by the Freſhneſs of her Looks and the Smile on her Face, I diſcover'd that it was Health. She was ſucceeded by another with haggard Form, and trembling Knees, whom I preſently knew to be Diſeaſe, who, join'd with a Savage Dame call'd Remorſe, laſh'd and ſtrove to goad them along; but finding it in vain, Diſeaſe chain'd them down, and continued with Remorſe to laſh and upbraid them till their Tapers expir'd, and I could perceive them no longer.

No ſooner had I averted my Glaſs from this ſad Spectacle, than I beheld a Concourſe of Perſons, with Might and Main clambering over the Rocks, and ſallying even from the Road of Virtue; and then toiling and panting up a craggy Hill. No ſooner had they reach'd one Eminence, but they urged on with the greater Fury to another, tumbling each other down from the Precipices with unrelenting Rage. I was at a loſs to determine what could entice them to expend and endanger their Tapers, and to put themſelves to ſuch Fatigue and Anguiſh, till I diſcovered it was the Hill of Ambition, and that the only End of their aſcending was to be gaz'd at by the Crowds below, who affected Admiration merely to be aſſiſted in climbing themſelves. I diſcern'd Numbers ſlipping off the Precipices, and daſh'd to Pieces with their Tapers in the Fall; and many more, after they had ſoar'd as high as they wiſh'd, endeavouring in vain, when their Sight was juſt vaniſhing, to deſcend and reach the Road of Virtue. Among the reſt I ſaw ſome, too feeble to aſcend, employing themſelves in pulling and thruſting others down that would aſcend; and inquiring who they were, found them to be the followers of Envy.

Below theſe I diſtinguiſh'd a Swarm with their Tapers almoſt ſpent, collecting with intenſe Diligence ſome ſhining Pebbles which lay among the Rocks. They were in vain admoniſh'd by ſome friendly Guardians of the Place to haſten into the Road of Virtue. I found as their Tapers began nearly to expire, they threw themſelves on the Ground, and watch'd and hugg'd the Trinkets they had gather'd, refuſing to ſtir a Step from the Place. By the Dimneſs of their Tapers, and frequent Groans, I diſcovered them to be the Victims of Avarice. I then turned my Perſpective towards the Path of Virtue, and near its Borders ſaw a Company reclined by a Rock ſolacing themſelves with a murmuring Brook; ſome ſleeping while their Tapers waſted away, and others amuſing themſelves with Straws, Bubbles, and Graſshoppers. I was ſurpriſed to find Creatures ſo eaſy and inactive; but, examining cloſer, found them incloſed in the Net of Sloth, and Remorſe haſtily ſtriding along to puniſh them with her Whip of Snakes.

My Attention was next engroſſed by a Train that I perceived one Moment walking ſteadily in the Path of Virtue, the next ſtarting off into the ſurrounding Country in Purſuit of Feathers and lucid Images which I ſaw Pleaſure inceſſantly expanding around them. Some when diſappointed would immediately return, others bewildered in the Search, loſt ſight of the Road, and before they could find it, their Tapers expir'd. My Guide told me they were the Sons of Folly and Paſſion.

Beſide theſe I beheld a Herd with ſolemn Pace one while croſſing to this Side of the Road and then to the other, ſtopping at every Pebble and accurately examining the Colour, Taſte, and Weight of the Grains of Duſt on the Path. Here ſome would not ſtir a Step till they could determine whether Folks in the Region of Felicity could ſee thro' their Ears, hear with their Noſes, and ſmell with their Eyes; others, tho' the Lord of the Cave had plann'd the Road himſelf, would be making out Lines, and puſhing every Paſſenger into them, or thruſting him if he refuſed, out of the Path; while their Companions ſtrove as hard to eraſe their Lines, to draw as many as they could into their own, and by affirming and ſwearing roundly, make them believe that they could not arrive at the Regions of Felicity, except by walking within their Limits. Aſtoniſhed at their Folly, I inquir'd, and diſcover'd that they were the Heirs of Polemic Divinity.—I turned my Eyes from theſe and diſcovered a Company of grave Perſonages; ſome hewing, with vaſt Fatigue, cut Parts of a Rock in Pieces, to ſee if the Inſide reſembled the Outſide: Others almoſt motionleſs on the Ground, with their Eyes fixed upwards, tormenting themſelves in attempting to diſcover what ſupported the Canopy of the Cave: Others wrangling till their Tapers went out, whether the Cave was made before them, or they before the Cave. My Guide informed me that they were of the Tribe of Abſtract Philoſophy. I diſcerned at a little Diſtance, a Number of fat drowſy Creatures, lolling together near the Road of Virtue, their goggling Eyes ever and anon caſt up toward the Region of Felicity. They called on every Traveller to ſit down ſecurely with them, and gaze at the happy Region, as that would carry them thither ſooner, and without the Trouble of walking in the Road. They appeared to be the Offspring of Preſumptious Faith, and I

POET'S CORNER.

REFLECTIONS on TIME and AGE.

RELENTLESS Time! destroying Power!
Whom Stone and Brass obey,
Who giv'st to every flying Hour
To work some new Decay;
Unheard, unheeded, and unseen,
Thy secret Saps prevail,
And ruin Man, a nice Machine,
By Nature form'd to fail.
My Change arrives; the Change I meet
Before I thought it nigh;
My Spring, my Years of Pleasure fleet,
And all their Beauties die.
In Age I search, and only find
A poor unfruitful Gain,
Grave Wisdom stalking slow behind,
Oppress'd with Loads of Pain.
My Ignorance could once beguile,
And fancy'd Joys inspire;
My Errors cherish'd Hope to smile
On newly born desire:
But now Experience shows the Bliss
For which I fondly sought,
Not worth the long impatient Wish,
And Ardour of the Thought.
My Youth met Fortune fair array'd,
In all her Pomp she shone,
And might, perhaps, have well essay'd
To make her Gifts my own;
But when I saw the Blessings shower
On some unworthy Mind,
I left the Chase, and own'd the Power
Was justly painted blind.
I pass'd the Glories which adorn
The splendid Courts of Kings,
And while the Persons mov'd my Scorn,
I rose to scorn the Things.
My Manhood felt a vigorous Fire,
By Love increas'd the more;
But Years, with coming Years, conspire
To break the Chains I wore.
Vainly the Time I have to roll
In sad Reflection flies;
Ye fondling Passions of my Soul!
Ye sweet Deceits! arise.
I wisely change the Scene within,
To Things that us'd to please;
In Pain, Philosophy is Spleen,
In Health, 'tis only Ease.

LONDON, April 11.

Yesterday, at a very numerous meeting of the Common Council and Inhabitants of the ward of Billingsgate, summoned in Butcher's-Hall, it was unanimously agreed to present the following addresses, to the Lord Mayor and to their Alderman. Accordingly this day at noon they waited on them in the Tower.

To the Right Hon. BRASS CROSBY, LORD MAYOR of the City of LONDON.

"MY LORD,

"We wait upon you to express our grateful sense of your Lordship's upright, constitutional conduct, and our concern for the disagreeable consequences which have ensued.

"We glow with resentment when we consider the injury offered your Lordship by this imprisonment: an imprisonment founded on the violation, and continued by the evasion of the law of this land."

"We beg leave to assure your Lordship that no time shall efface the sense we entertain of this outrage; nor will we neglect any measure in our power to support the constitution of this free country, and bring to justice those, who influence the Representatives of the People to attack the liberties they were chosen to defend."

To which his Lordship returned a polite Answer.

To RICHARD OLIVER, Esq; ALDERMAN of the Ward of BILLINGSGATE.

The Address of the Inhabitants of the said Ward.

"SIR,

"WE wait upon you to express our grateful sense of your steady, upright, and constitutional conduct, as a Magistrate of this City, as well as one of the Representatives of the People.

"We are sensibly affected with the disagreeable consequences which have ensued.—We glow with resentment for the injury offered to this City in our Alderman's person, by an imprisonment founded on the violation and continued by the evasion of the laws of the kingdom.

"We beg leave to assure you, Sir, that no time shall efface the sense we entertain of these transactions, nor will we neglect any measure in our power to support the free constitution of this country.

"The particular relation we bear to you justly demands our warmest acknowledgments of gratitude. Be assured, that we shall be happy upon every occasion to concur with you in such measures as may tend to restore to the People, in general, and this City, in particular, their violated rights and privileges."

Butler's-Hall, April 10, 1771.

To which Mr. OLIVER replied,

"Gentlemen,

"Nothing but the situation of this Country could have overcome the natural reluctance which I have always had to appear in any public station; but having engaged in one from Principle, I will act in it by the same principle: as long as I shall continue to have your approbation and my own, I will endeavour to secure the first by never forfeiting the latter.

"The manner in which you are pleased to approve my present conduct gives me great satisfaction; and I can only repeat the unaffected promise I made to you at my election, that whenever the Ward of Billingsgate shall change their opinion of me I will cheerfully give place to some more useful Magistrate. Till that happens Gentlemen, I shall in every situation, whether in or out of prison, be happy when I receive from you such marks of affection and attachment, which I shall always entertain for my Constituents."

To JOHN WILKES, Esq:

SIR,

THAT I may be explicit as early as possible after you desire that I should explain myself concerning the Shrievalty, I must inform you that I am determined not to serve the office of Sheriff with you; because I really do not think from your own declarations that your political aims are similar to mine.

This resolution I must communicate to the Livery, if you join me in your nomination. I am, Sir, your humble Servant,

RICHARD OLIVER.

Tower, 11th of April, 1771.

To RICHARD OLIVER, Esq.

SIR,

I did not receive your letter till nine last night, when I was in the City with my Common Council. When we were alone a very few days ago, you asked me, if I meant to be Sheriff the ensuing year? I answered with the frankness of my nature to a friend, that if I had the honour of being chosen, I would not decline that troublesome and expensive office, and that, in the actual crisis of affairs, I really wished it for various reasons of great public utility, which I am persuaded live still in your memory. Yesterday morning I put the same question to you. Your verbal answer was not explicit; your letter is. You say, "I am determined not to serve the office of Sheriff with you." The propriety of such a declaration does not strike me. I consider it as the duty of every Gentlemen to submit to the Livery the choice of his Colleague, and not to refuse an office, because he disapproves another person, of whom his own constituents entertain a favourable opinion. I am ready to serve the office of Sheriff with you, Sir, or any other Gentleman given by the Livery as a Colleague, should they think proper to elect me. You add, "because I really do not think from "your own declarations that your political aims are similar to "mine." My declarations have always been very explicit: My aims fair and honourable. I am satisfied that your's are no less upright. I started much earlier than you in political life. I gave my public Creed on several occasions. You have done the same. Our sentiments have always coincided, although our expressions have varied. How then can our political aims not be similar? I wish to know in what they differ. I will at any time yield to the conviction of superior reason.

You conclude, "this resolution I must communicate to the "Livery if you join me in your nomination" I never entertained the idea of nomination proceeding from myself. If I am called upon, I will serve, but I shall never dictate to the Livery what they should do. I shall likewise not fail to communicate to so respectable a body, every transaction of a public nature, respecting their rights or interests, and I will obey their commands.

I am, Sir, your most humble Servant,

JOHN WILKES.

[N. B. Mr. Wilkes has received no answer to this Letter.]

Amongst the many testimonies of the affectionate regards paid to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor in the Tower, are daily presents to his Lordship from Town and Country.

This day two elegant sword-knots were sent to the Lord Mayor and Mr. Oliver, worked by a young Lady, with the following motto: "Quique sui memores alios fecere merendo."

A certain sage Committee have discovered, after the most mature and deliberate investigation, that the penalty for a breach of privilege is excommunication.

Amongst the diversions usual at Easter, we may reckon the following as one of the most laudable; a considerable farmer, at High-Easter, in Essex, gave on Easter-Monday a new apron, to be spun by six girls of that Parish, from the age of fourteen to sixteen; the time allotted for spinning was one hour: when the winner spun seven knot, and an half, and ten bouts; a ribbon was given to the second best, who performed seven knots and an half.

When Lord Chesterfield was asked, what he thought of the late Spanish negotiation, he replied, "I think it is very like Spanish Snuff; it irritates the nostrials of our Politicians; they sneeze copiously, wipe their noses, and pocket the affront."

Extract of a Letter from Paris, March 23.

"The Court of Moneyers has called an Assembly of its Members to consider of ways and means to reimburse the officers of the Court of Moneyers at Lyons, which had been suppressed and united to that at Paris. The sum demanded was 800,000 livres; but an arret has been issued, in which is shewn the impossibility of being able to raise the said sum. This has given occasion to the above body to join the other Courts, in setting forth the calamities which afflict Magistracy, and which threaten the subversion of the laws and their administration.

By a letter received on Monday, from James-Town in Virginia, we are informed, that one Hugh Andrews, a labourer, killed a rattle-snake which measured fourteen feet and a half in length, and four feet in circumference, the skin of which is brought over to England as a curiosity, by a Captain now in the river.

A letter from the Hague mentions, that the Grand Pensionary is the only Dutchman now in the Cabinet: The Bentinck family are quite laid aside, and all is governed by the King of Prussia and his family.

BOSTON, June 3.

In the House of Representatives, May 29, 1771.

ORDERED, that Mr. Otis, Mr. Adams, Mr. Hancock, Capt. Thayer, and Mr. Ingersoll, be a Committee to wait on his Excellency the Governor with the following Message.

THOMAS CUSHING, Speaker.

May it please your Excellency,

THE Great and General Court or Assembly being again convened at Harvard-College by virtue of his Majesty's writ, under your hand and seal, the House of Representatives think it their duty before they proceed to the public business, humbly to lay their Remonstrance before your Excellency.

By the Charter of this Province, the Governor for the time being is invested with the full power of convening, adjourning, proroguing and dissolving the Assembly; yet it is a power in trust, and the House conceive that your Excellency is indispensibly obliged to exercise it for the public good of the Province, for which end alone you are entrusted with it.

It has been found by experience that the town of Boston is the only convenient place for the holding the General Assembly; accordingly the Province has been at great expence in erecting and supporting a suitable building for that purpose; and the Assembly has been usually convened and held there, from the time of the settlement of the Country, excepting at times when, by reason of contagious sickness, the lives of the members have been endangered.

This House cannot conceive of one good purpose that can be served by the holding the Assembly at present in this place: On the contrary, it must unavoidably be attended with many great inconveniences and real injuries not only to the members themselves, but also to others whose business necessarily calls for their attendance here. These are so obvious, and have been so lately pointed out to your Excellency, that it is needless at this time to mention them.

The holding the Assembly out of the Town of Boston through the whole of the last year, so strongly and justly remonstrated against to your Excellency by both Houses, was considered as a grievance, by the people in general in the Province; and while it is continued, it will have a tendency to prevent a restoration of that harmony between the several branches of the Assembly, which is so earnestly to be desired by all good men.

The House therefore cannot but persuade themselves, that upon these considerations, your Excellency will, for the sake of promoting his Majesty's service, and the good of the Province, exercise the power fully vested in you by the charter, and adjourn or prorogue this Assembly to its ancient, usual and only convenient place, the Town-House in Boston.

The next Day his Excellency the Governor sent the House the following Message in Answer to the above.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,

YOU may depend upon my representing to his Majesty, by the first vessels, the inconveniencies which you mention, in your Message of yesterday, to attend your sitting in any other place than the Town of Boston. I am restrained from holding the Court there without his Majesty's express leave: I hope before another Session to obtain this leave: I will endeavour that every obstacle may be removed, and, upon this, and every other occasion, to convince you that I am desirous not meerly of preserving to you the enjoyment of all your just Rights and Privileges, but of procuring every convenience so far as shall consist with my duty to the King. T. HUTCHINSON.

WILLIAM CAMPBELL,
(Shop-keeper at the Fly Market,)
INTENDS leaving this for Europe, by the firſt of July next, deſires all perſons who have any demands on him, to bring in their Accompts, and receive payments, and requeſts all thoſe who are indebted to him, to diſcharge the ſame by that time. He hopes this will be a ſufficient Notice, and that they will not oblige him to take any rigorous methods for the recovery of his Money.
He has on hand, A LARGE ASSORTMENT of SHOP GOODS, which he will SELL off at prime COST. 81—84.

TO BE SOLD,
In Lots of about 12 or 1300 Acres,
A Tract of land containing 16000 acres, on the north ſide of the Mohawk's River, in the patent of Kayoderoſeras, in the county of Albany. This tract was ſold only a few weeks ago by the commiſſioners, for defraying the charges of partition of the ſaid patent, and is well known to be extraordinary good land; it nearly adjoins the patent of Schenectady, the higheſt part being not above 6, and the fartheſt not more than 12 miles from the Borough-Town, to which there is a good waggon-road, and where there is almoſt as good and ready a market for all ſorts of grain as in the city of New-York; the city of Albany is alſo within 20 miles from the centre of the ſaid tract: It may therefore be juſtly ſaid that there are no new lands in this colony more advantageouſly ſituated, and if they could have been ſold ſo late as about a dozen years ago, would in all probability have been as well ſettled and as valuable as other lands in their neighbourhood, of which ſome at this day would fell for upwards of 25 l. per acre. This tract has alſo the advantage of a ſmall lake near the centre of it, which abounds with certain kind of fiſh and wild fowl. Such perſons therefore as are diſpoſed to remove from old and worn out farms, to fertile, rich, new lands, which will abundantly compenſate the labour and pains they may chooſe to beſtow on them, and afford a comfortable ſubſiſtence for themſelves and family; will pleaſe ſpeedily to apply to us the ſubſcribers, to whom the ſaid tract is conveyed in truſt to be ſold for the benefit of the proprietors, and they may agree on very reaſonable terms with

SPEECHES
IN PARLIAMENT,
On the Commitment of
THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON
AND
ALDERMAN OLIVER,
TO THE TOWER,
Together with ſeveral Pieces on the ſame Subject on both Sides the Queſtion, the Opinion of ſome eminent Lawyers on the Caſe, ſome Proceedings thereon of the Common Council of London, with the Recorder's Speech, &c.
As theſe Speeches and Writings are very remarkable, and upon a Subject extremely intereſting to every Engliſhman; as they give us a clear and diſtinct View of the reſpective Rights of the People, and of each Branch of the Legiſlature, and therefore ought to be often read, well underſtood, and carefully preſerved, as determining a moſt important Point, and as a laſting Monument of one of the moſt violent and dangerous Attacks ever made upon our glorious Conſtitution, with the moſt noble, vigorous and effectual Defence of it; many of our Cuſtomers and others, in order to preſerve theſe valuable Pieces entire, and free from the Mixture of other Matters, and to avoid the Trouble of ſearching for them as they lie ſcatter'd thro' ſeveral News Papers, have encouraged the Printer to make the Collection; and it is not doubted will encourage the Sale ſo as to prevent his being a loſer by the Work.

Juſt imported in the laſt Veſſels from London and to be SOLD by
JONAS PHILIPS,
